

Son of Mr W. Darby

Waranga Chronicle

10 September, 1874

Processions to our local cemetery have occurred with painful frequency of late, and in the absence of a Church of England minister, the kindly offices of Mr. Hicks, senior, as reader of the burial service have been in constant requisition.

Since the death of Mr. Moss, particulars of which we noticed last week, two other interments have taken place, viz., that of the little fellow Birch, whose death was, as our readers will remember, the result of a melancholy accident which occurred last week; the second, an infant son of our fellow townsman, Mr. W. Darby.

The death of the latter was caused by a severe attack of inflammation of the intestines.
